

Girl eats father's marijuana-laced bar

Chippewa.com | August 31, 2014

A Chippewa Falls man faces a charge of second degree recklessly endangering safety after his daughter ate a chocolate bar with 225 milligrams of THC, the active ingredient of marijuana.

Jason N. Hetke, 38, 1619 Nicholas Lane No. 3 is also charged with child neglect and possession of THC dating from June 12 in Chippewa Falls. Hetke is scheduled to appear before Judge James Isaacson at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 28.

According to a criminal complaint:

The girl appeared intoxicated in school after eating an entire THC chocolate bar, that has the nickname of a Colorado Bar. She said she ate edibles brought back from Colorado, which legalized marijuana for adults over 21 in 2012.

The girl said the bar was about a third of the size of a dollar bill. Her pulse was so weak that a school officer and an officer were unable to read it. In her pants pocket there was this writing: "Blue Kudu Chocolate, 225 mg of THC, 22.5 doses. Extremely potent. Do not eat all at once."

The girl said she found the bar in a dresser drawer inside her father's bedroom.

Using a search warrant, police opened a night stand in Jason Hetke's residence and found a bag labeled "Colorado Bar," that said the weight of the package was 43 grams and was labeled as being medicinal THC.

In another bedroom police found a bag weighing 3 grams. It was butane hash oil, a concentrated form of THC.